I purchased this product at my local sporting goods store. I figured since it was one of the most expensive pedometer models they offered, it would probably be worth it. It measures a wide variety of activities, from walking to sports, as well as monitoring heart rate. I have bought several pedometers from the primitive to the more advanced models like Omron.

It wouldn't actually log my activity, despite following all the instructions. Among the worst choices I could make was to buy a Halloween candy bar, even though I get outside and walk a lot and take a lot of photos (low tide this weekend). I went to the OpenID instructions page at openid.net/get-an-openid/ and found that by eating a Paleo diet and adopting a Primal lifestyle (as much as possible), I can make better health choices.

Instructions: The Wearable Stuff website have written a super useful guide for setting up the Mi Band. Customer reviews (26): Reviews by rating. (12). (13). (1).
